

Alpaca verses Llamas

While some people might accidentally get these interesting animals confused with llamas, alpacas are actually a totally different animal.

While they might look similar, alpacas are much smaller than llamas.

llamas have always been used as beasts of burden, while alpacas are strictly bred for their wool.

Another way you can tell an alpaca from a llama (other than their size, of course) is their ears.

If you look closely, you will notice that alpacas have shorter, straighter ears than a llama.